To design and test a new urine point-of-care device (POC-device) for rapid screening of the urinary tract using urine samples obtained from dogs undergoing anesthesia for elective surgery. Prospective experimental trial. Twelve dogs. The POC-device tested was a glucose meter that included a rapid strip for on-site detection of glucose concentration in the urine. All dogs underwent a cystocentesis to obtain urine samples. The first urine sample obtained was immediately analyzed by the glucose strip, and the remaining urine samples were analyzed by the POC-device. Glucose concentrations obtained by the POC-device and the glucose strip in the first urine sample were compared. Glucose concentrations obtained with the POC-device and the glucose strip in the other urine samples were compared. For the first urine sample, the glucose concentration measured with the POC-device was not significantly different from that measured with the strip (18.4 ± 7.4 mg/dL and 17.5 ± 8.2 mg/dL, respectively). Glucose concentrations in all other urine samples obtained with the POC-device were not significantly different from those obtained with the strip. The POC-device tested was suitable for rapid screening of the urinary tract. The POC-device is a promising point-of-care device for screening the urinary tract in dogs undergoing anesthesia for elective surgery. Saints scented the Holy Spirit as they ran on the pitch during a training session at St Mary's on Thursday morning. But that wasn't enough to distract the No.1s from an England honours ceremony ahead of the crucial autumn series at home to Wales, with their role models Brian Ashton, Gary Slater and Kevin Sinfield all present as players who have helped them in the past were honoured. Those who were present for the occasion included England team-mates James Haskell and Sam Burgess, as well as Sam Simmonds, Nick Kennedy, Mark Texeira, Mike Tindall, Martyn Rooney, Alun Wyn Jones, Dave Beard, Sean
